We invite you to become a member of the oldest women's press club in history with a more than 120-year legacy, founded by seven newspaperwomen to promote the exchange of opinion, provide encouragement and strengthen women's professional standing in the media.

We welcome many types of media professionals! Our club boasts members working as editors, photographers, broadcasters, freelance writers, public relations professionals, their supporters and male counterparts.

Annually, we host both networking and professional development events, including our spring banquet. We have visited PNC Park, Pittsburgh Zoo and journalism-related exhibits at the Andy Warhol Museum and Heinz History Center, as well as partnering with other local press clubs.

As part of our mission, we seek to encourage future generations of journalists by awarding students with the Gertrude Gordon Memorial Fund scholarship. The club strives to honor its past and forge ahead into the future, recently revising the bylaws and creating an online presence.

We are working toward many new goals. With opportunities for members -- new and renewing alike -- to lead together, won't you join us?
